

ATG TAPS TWO EXPERIENCED PROFESSIONALS TO JOIN LEADERSHIP TEAM

Selections underscore ATG's commitment to further strengthening its leadership team to guide the company's growth strategy

Utrecht, Netherlands, Feb. 28, 2022 – ATG Travel Worldwide, B.V., a global leader in business travel and expense management, continues to gain momentum in its goal of implementing a united growth strategy by selecting two seasoned professionals to top leadership positions. Following the recent announcement of Martina Egger as Chief Marketing Officer, ATG named Robert Loeschke to the post of Vice President of Sales, DACH region, and appointed Mariska Oldewening as Human Resources Manager.

Loeschke will focus on expanding ATG's client portfolio in the European market. Before joining ATG, he spent three years as Director Global Sales, overseeing global clients for Carlson Wagonlit Travel Beheermaatschappij, B.V. Prior to that, for seven years he was employed by American Express Global Business Travel, responsible for global sales and business development.

Robert Loeschke – VP of Sales, DACH Region

“Sales is about creating mutual trust, forming positive relationships, and actively listening to what a client wants,” said Loeschke. “ATG has embraced these virtues, using agility and flexibility to tailor products and service solutions to its clients' needs. I am proud to be joining a company that understands that the client comes first, and very much looking forward to being part of the Executive Leadership Team that can make a difference in strengthening ATG as a leading travel management company.”

As HR Manager, Oldewening will be based at ATG worldwide headquarters in Utrecht, Netherlands, and will oversee all ATG offices from an HR perspective. For the past 14 years, she was Senior HR Business Partner for four different business units at Euretco, the largest non-food retail service organization in The Netherlands, and was responsible for translating the organization strategy and culture into the HR policy.

“It is such a privilege to join ATG’s leadership team, and I very much look forward to working closely with my leadership colleagues to implement a unified growth strategy,” said Oldewening. “Just as part of that strategy is to regard each client individually, I also pledge to treat every employee according to his/her specific needs while applying ATG’s performance and management policies consistently throughout the company. “

Tammy Krings, Chief Executive Officer of ATG Travel, is pleased to welcome Loeschke and Oldewening to ATG. “Robert’s approach to sales is in lockstep with our philosophy of putting the customer first, recognizing that each client is unique. He will reinforce and support our value proposition of customer-centric service as he assumes a place on the leadership team. Mariska is a professional with a clear understanding as to how HR is vital to a company’s overall success. As a people-oriented communicator who combines a sense of values with objective thinking skills, she will be an asset to ATG.”
